Tracey Emin's first artists' book, inscribed by her – "I wanted this to be the truth Tracey Emin 1994"

A remarkable artists' book by the major Young British Artist Tracey Emin when she had just emerged on the world stage. It takes the form of a raw, self-revelatory poem dealing with her childhood, family, sexuality and relationships. As ever she bravely lays her experiences before the world talking directly to the reader. The variety of media – printmaking, photography, writing and hand stitching is distinctive Emin as is her ability to interweave desire, gender, power and home and create a massive impact on the observer and absorber of her art.
